Trade Festival

Lanterns lined the road while goods changed hands under careful eyes. There was laughter, but not carelessness; bargaining, but not greed. Small wonders passed from stall to stall, and by dusk the market felt like a promise the settlement could keep.

Crafting Fair

Tools, cloth, carvings, and cookfires filled the square. The fair was louder in spirit than in sound. Pride in honest work passed from hand to hand, and knowledge moved almost unnoticed between neighbours who had come only to look.
