Clear Nights and Plans

The clouds parted after sunset, and lamps burned late over maps and ledgers. In the quiet, choices that had seemed tangled became plain. A clear night can give momentum before a single tool is lifted.

A Little Time

A gate held open for one extra moment can change a welcome. This week patience did what speed could not: it made room for the hesitant, the weary, and the nearly turned away.

Shared Hands

We divided the burden before it could divide us. Every small effort left a mark: a lifted beam, a carried pail, a repaired hinge. Shared work steadied the settlement more surely than any single grand gesture.

I

Next active Burden resolved: reduce its resource cost by 2 resources of your choice.

II

Next active Burden resolved: reduce its resource cost by 4 resources of your choice.

III

Next active Burden resolved: reduce its resource cost by 6 resources of your choice.

Shelter Holds

After the storm, I inspected the shelters and found the old repairs still holding. Beams strained but did not fail; walls shuddered but stayed true. Care given early had kept fear from becoming loss.

I

Remove 1 Strain from 1 Supported tile.

II

Remove 1 Strain from up to 2 Supported tiles.

III

Remove 1 Strain from up to 3 Supported tiles.
