BURDEN

Storehouses Disagree

Ledgers that once seemed clear no longer agree. Barrels are marked twice, crates move without notation, and every keeper swears their count is true. Numbers can quarrel like neighbours.

Promises Overstretched

Word travels faster than preparation. The settlement's welcome is now spoken of beyond the hills, but open doors require more than roofs and food. Every promise made must still be carried.

Old Wounds Reopen

Peace does not close every hurt. A song, a sigil, a name spoken too lightly can uncover wounds only just beginning to heal. Afterwards, silence does the damage words began.
